Caretta caretta

The beach adjacent to our facilities is one of the nesting sites for Caretta caretta.

Essential preparations are underway on our beach to safeguard and coexist with sea turtles, whose breeding season spans from May 1 to October 1.

It is our responsibility to safeguard the nests along the Mediterranean coasts, which are crucial for the survival of sea turtle species.

KUM ZAMBAĞI

Sand lilies, an endangered species, can be found on the beach of our facility. The sand lilies that bloom between August and October are often misidentified as ordinary plants by tourists visiting the beach, leading to their plucking or destruction. To mitigate such occurrences, our facility safeguards this plant by designating it as an endemic species. Endangered plants hold significant value for our natural heritage, and it is our responsibility to safeguard them.
